How We Retail Irises Now

By Boardman, Needham and Seyler

We have practically stopped the retailing of irises and other plants, by mail as you may have noticed, but are growing and selling more plants of good varieties than ever before. We find that a display of irises attracts thousands of prosperous visitors and creates iris and general planting demand thruout our community. It builds up a local clientele who are not buyers of "one each" at the cheapest price, from a dozen catalogs.

We sell in lots of 10 to 100 roots of a variety for mass display, because the visitor sees the pleasing effect of "mass" in our nursery rows. In many cases the plants are dug while in bloom and the buyer takes them along.

We preach living and changing pictures of color with gratifying success.

We think we are touching an "untouched iris market" which can consume every commercial iris now existing in this country. We send out invitations, use newspapers, radio and general ballyhoo during the blooming season.

The cost per visitor is less than the cost per catalog inquiry used to be and every visitor gets a more complete, personal and lasting impression than if we sent a hundred catalogs. They do not stop at buying irises but roam thru the nursery and order most anything.

We advertise "Visit Weiser Park" the year around but nothing attracts visitors so much as "Iris Time." A planting is usually located next to the highway, and the massed rainbow colors of Irises will stop anything from Fords to Duensbergs.

We believe the "untouched market" can be reached by any nurseryman with gratifying profit on the iris transactions, let alone the incidental business and publicity.

If we are right in our belief we need say no more except that the iris trade list, here presented, has been priced to encourage your orders and the stock has been grown and will be furnished to encourage your continued orders.
